

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSON HOUSE.

The New York Mailer, James Thomas, was charged on remand with assaulting another compositor named Maddy, who was employed at the printing office of the South-Eastern Railway Company, and who was severely beaten about the head with a pen-knife.

BOW-STREET.

The case of the married woman, charged on remand with obtaining money by false pretences, is still before the court.

PROBABLE MURDER.

A constable stated that he saw the defendant in the Tottenham-court-road, on Tuesday evening, about 12 minutes past seven, in the company of a young man.

WESTMINSTER.

THE CANDIDATE FOR SOMERSET.—Mr. Thomas Coste, 40, Gower-street, Parliamentary candidate, of 44, Clarendon-square, Nottingham, was charged on remand with assaulting a woman named Edler, a servant, at 4, Markham-square, Chelsea.

NORTH LONDON.

CHARGING THE SALVATION ARMY.—Mrs. Eileen Purcell, 20, was charged on remand with stealing from 259, Mare-street, Hackney, the silk pocket-handkerchief valued at 6s. 6d., the property of one Sarah Hubbard, a Salvation Army cadet.

CLERKENWELL.

ASSAULT ON A VESTRYMAN.—John Rooney, of Bond-court, Bond-street, Cornwall-road, Lambeth, was summoned by Joseph Walton, of 13, Clarendon-street, Clerkenwell, for an assault.

ALLEGED BLACKMAILING AT OXFORD.

Maitland Francis Morland, described as a tutor, aged 65, of 23, St. John-street, Oxford, was charged with blackmailing Lord Holdfield.

WEST LONDON.

THE "UNIVERSAL AID AND MEDICAL SOCIETY"—The Hon. Mrs. Mary Fitzroy, was charged on remand with obtaining money from Louis James, of Fulham, by false pretences.

DAISY HOPKINS.

A young woman giving the name of Daisy Hopkins, 18, a milliner at Cambridge, was charged on remand with obtaining money from Lord Holdfield.

Now, Lord Holdfield had never been near the defendant, but it was obvious that both these letters were written with a view of entangling Lord Holdfield into a lawsuit.

MATILDA FRANCIS MORLAND.

by the man in the dock with intention of blackmailing Lord Holdfield. No notice was taken of the second letter, which was written on July 31, 1891, showing that the prisoner had made up his mind to try and get some money out of Lord Holdfield.

THE ALLEGED ANARCHIST PLOTS.

The six prisoners, Frederick Charles, John Dickfield, Joseph Thomas Deacon, and John Battolo, were again brought up for trial on remand on Monday.

A GIFT TO ALL FREE.

To all suffering from Chronic Kidney and Liver Disease, DIABETES, RHEUMATISM, GRAVEL, GOUT, and other human body ailments, the following is a list of the names of the donors.

THE CHARGE AGAINST M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

M. Clovis Bonaparte and Mr. William Almond, solicitor, of Coleman-street, were charged on remand at the West London police-court on Tuesday, with conspiring to defraud.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

In consequence of the late illness of Mrs. Bonaparte the magistrate allowed him to be seated in the dock. Mr. Grosvenor, junior, appeared for the defendant.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

His husband informed her that he was 15 years of age when his mother died, and that he had inherited a small property.

A CAKEBAKER ATTACKED BY BURGLARS.

About 11 o'clock on Wednesday night some burglars proceeded from the third floor, 162, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, premises in the occupation of Mrs. Maitland.

PRESENTATION TO THE POLICE.

At the Albion hotel, Ludgate-circuit on Tuesday, a presentation was made to the constables, nine in number, who succeeded in capturing the five Fleet-street burglars.

THE GREENWICH BURGLARS.

The two constables, Lippin and Smith, who were badly injured while endeavouring to capture the burglars at the Greenwich police-station, were promoted to the rank of sergeant and sub-inspector Easton, who was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

THE CHARGE AGAINST M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

M. Clovis Bonaparte and Mr. William Almond, solicitor, of Coleman-street, were charged on remand at the West London police-court on Tuesday, with conspiring to defraud.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

In consequence of the late illness of Mrs. Bonaparte the magistrate allowed him to be seated in the dock. Mr. Grosvenor, junior, appeared for the defendant.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

His husband informed her that he was 15 years of age when his mother died, and that he had inherited a small property.

A CAKEBAKER ATTACKED BY BURGLARS.

About 11 o'clock on Wednesday night some burglars proceeded from the third floor, 162, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, premises in the occupation of Mrs. Maitland.

PRESENTATION TO THE POLICE.

At the Albion hotel, Ludgate-circuit on Tuesday, a presentation was made to the constables, nine in number, who succeeded in capturing the five Fleet-street burglars.

THE GREENWICH BURGLARS.

The two constables, Lippin and Smith, who were badly injured while endeavouring to capture the burglars at the Greenwich police-station, were promoted to the rank of sergeant and sub-inspector Easton, who was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

THE CHARGE AGAINST M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

M. Clovis Bonaparte and Mr. William Almond, solicitor, of Coleman-street, were charged on remand at the West London police-court on Tuesday, with conspiring to defraud.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

In consequence of the late illness of Mrs. Bonaparte the magistrate allowed him to be seated in the dock. Mr. Grosvenor, junior, appeared for the defendant.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

His husband informed her that he was 15 years of age when his mother died, and that he had inherited a small property.

A CAKEBAKER ATTACKED BY BURGLARS.

About 11 o'clock on Wednesday night some burglars proceeded from the third floor, 162, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, premises in the occupation of Mrs. Maitland.

PRESENTATION TO THE POLICE.

At the Albion hotel, Ludgate-circuit on Tuesday, a presentation was made to the constables, nine in number, who succeeded in capturing the five Fleet-street burglars.

THE GREENWICH BURGLARS.

The two constables, Lippin and Smith, who were badly injured while endeavouring to capture the burglars at the Greenwich police-station, were promoted to the rank of sergeant and sub-inspector Easton, who was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

LONDON COURT SESSIONS.

A FORTHVING PROSECUTOR.—Aldred Cross, clerk, of the London County Council, was charged on remand with obtaining by false pretences two sums of £5, and also with attempting to obtain £20, in each instance, from the South-Eastern Railway Company.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

In consequence of the late illness of Mrs. Bonaparte the magistrate allowed him to be seated in the dock. Mr. Grosvenor, junior, appeared for the defendant.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

His husband informed her that he was 15 years of age when his mother died, and that he had inherited a small property.

A CAKEBAKER ATTACKED BY BURGLARS.

About 11 o'clock on Wednesday night some burglars proceeded from the third floor, 162, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, premises in the occupation of Mrs. Maitland.

PRESENTATION TO THE POLICE.

At the Albion hotel, Ludgate-circuit on Tuesday, a presentation was made to the constables, nine in number, who succeeded in capturing the five Fleet-street burglars.

THE GREENWICH BURGLARS.

The two constables, Lippin and Smith, who were badly injured while endeavouring to capture the burglars at the Greenwich police-station, were promoted to the rank of sergeant and sub-inspector Easton, who was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

THE CHARGE AGAINST M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

M. Clovis Bonaparte and Mr. William Almond, solicitor, of Coleman-street, were charged on remand at the West London police-court on Tuesday, with conspiring to defraud.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

In consequence of the late illness of Mrs. Bonaparte the magistrate allowed him to be seated in the dock. Mr. Grosvenor, junior, appeared for the defendant.

M. CLOVIS BONAPARTE.

His husband informed her that he was 15 years of age when his mother died, and that he had inherited a small property.

A CAKEBAKER ATTACKED BY BURGLARS.

About 11 o'clock on Wednesday night some burglars proceeded from the third floor, 162, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, premises in the occupation of Mrs. Maitland.

PRESENTATION TO THE POLICE.

At the Albion hotel, Ludgate-circuit on Tuesday, a presentation was made to the constables, nine in number, who succeeded in capturing the five Fleet-street burglars.

THE GREENWICH BURGLARS.

The two constables, Lippin and Smith, who were badly injured while endeavouring to capture the burglars at the Greenwich police-station, were promoted to the rank of sergeant and sub-inspector Easton, who was promoted to the rank of sergeant.